QVH is a centre of excellence with an international reputation for pioneering complex surgical techniques and treatments. It became renowned during the Second World War through the pioneering work of Sir Archibald McIndoe.

We are proud of the numerous developments and innovations that have arisen from our surgeons and non-surgical team. We have a strong research ethic and are keen that anyone joining our team participates in developing the future of plastic surgery.

Everything we do is informed by our passion for providing the highest quality care, the best clinical outcomes and a safe and positive patient experience. If you believe you have the necessary skills and are excited by the opportunities the hospital presents during 2016 and 2017 come and meet the consultants and current registrars at this event to discuss your career aspirations.
